Experienced independent monitors

the importance of independent monitors

Independent monitors are your eyes and ears at the investigative clinical trial site. They need to have the clinical and scientific background to be your on-site representative and help you efficiently manage your project.

Some of the benefits of contracting with independent monitors include:

- Monitors supplement internal staffing
- Monitors reduce the risk associated with hiring and supporting staff
- Monitors provide specialized assistance for difficult or problematic situations

Independent monitors have significant depth of applicable experience that help make them highly-sought professional partners in the investigative clinical trial industry.

the value of Glaser Research Group

Rigor and Relationships

The Glaser Research Group uses thorough pre-screening processes with its monitors in order to build the strongest possible working relationships.

Glaser Research Group works with the monitors as needed throughout the life of each project. This oversight helps assure that all visits and reports occur in a timely, accurate, and standardized manner according to corporate and sponsor SOPs.

All monthly visits within a project can be billed monthly on a single invoice, simplifying your record-keeping and eliminating payment hassles.

Training and Support

To be a successful independent monitor requires continuous training and education. Glaser monitors are current and knowledgeable about the latest information and technologies in the sector.

Glaser Research Group provides trouble-shooting solutions for the problems and issues that arise. What that means to you is that you have a partner dedicated to not just filling a need gap on your project, but a partner dedicated to providing answers and solutions during the course of the project. It also means that the independent monitor has a support network available when needed.

Therapeutic Areas

Glaser Research Group provides monitors with specific indication or therapeutic experience to fit your project's needs. Our multi-national network means that we're connected with the unique and diverse skill sets to fit your project.
